

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A plastic ferrule is laser welded to the stripped end of an optical fiber using a highly radiation absorptive transitory material between the outer plastic surface of the fiber and the inner plastic surface of the ferrule. The use of an intermediary transitory material of high-radiation absorbing material creates a symmetrical weld pool which contributes to higher mechanical strength in the weld area.

---